

Let's Crash a Bank

Crash a bank? Why? Because the big “money center” banks have way too much power. Banks like Citi, B of A, Capitol One, WaMu and others control our lives. It is time we took back our financial independence.

How is easy. Banks require two things. They require deposits that provide the money to loan. They require cash flow to pay interest on the accounts and provide their income. We can strangle them at both ends.

First, if you bank with any of these folks, close your accounts. Move your money to a local bank or even better a credit union. Shrink their lending base.

Second, cancel your credit cards and pay off your account. If you still believe you really need a credit card instead of just a debit card, get one from your new financial institution.

Why? We must regain our independence both as individuals and as a nation. We are not an independent nation when foreign entities such as the Sovereign Wealth Fund of Dubai control our banks. Want to get Citibank's attention? When you pull your money out and pay off your credit card, tell them you are doing it because they went to Dubai for money instead of the citizens of the United States.

Bank of America? They bought Countrywide. I believe that Countrywide should have been allowed to fail. If you do also, pull your money.

These are just two examples. Look at your own “financial institution”. Has it gone capital shopping from people who just might not have our best interests at heart? If it has, pull your money. No bank can exist without a customer base no matter how much of themselves they sell to unfriendly foreign interests. Let's express our displeasure with our dollars.
