

Iranian Activist Probably Assassinated in Houston

An Iranian activist for Iranian women's rights has probably been assassinated in Houston.

A Texas medical student well-known in her community as an Iranian activist was mysteriously shot and killed in her car, just yards from her home.

Gelareh Bagherzadeh, 30, was driving through her Houston townhouse complex around midnight on Monday when she was shot dead through her car window.

"When officers arrived, they found a vehicle had run into a garage door at that location with the engine running and tires spinning on the pavement. Ms. Bagherzadeh was found slumped over in the driver's seat," the Houston Police Department said in a statement.

Authorities said nothing appeared to have been stolen from her car. Her cell phone and purse were found inside.

"Homicide investigators responded to the scene and were told by witnesses that several gunshots were heard, a crash and then tires squealing," the statement said. (<http://news.yahoo.com/iranian-student-activist-shot-death-texas-193747641--abc-news.html>)

Analysis. I believe that this was an assassination of a person who could be a serious embarrassment to the government of Iran. It is also a warning that the mullahocracy can reach out to you even in the United States if you oppose them publicly.

Expect the Houston police to tap dance around this for a long time. If this type of crime happened in a Hispanic neighborhood it would be written off as a cartel or gang hit. Why then does not the Houston Police Department consider that this might be the same type of crime from a different cartel? That would present international difficulties for the United States. Somebody would have to admit that there might be Hezbollah cells in the United States. But a mysterious murder of an Iranian activist? I was informed in February, 1987, that there were Hezbollah cells in the Los Angeles area.

Meanwhile, an assassination force has been formed to also eliminate those Iranians who oppose the supreme leader in the event of war breaking out between the United States and Iran over sanctions imposed to thwart Iran's nuclear weapons program.

Meanwhile on Tuesday, a website for Iranian military insiders revealed that a "Removal Committee" under the orders of Major-General Hassan Firoozabadi, the head of the Iranian armed forces, has been formed at the Revolutionary Guards Sar' Allah base. SepahOnline reports the agenda of this committee is based on the possibility of war with the United States. Its mission includes sabotage and assassination before the war, during the war and after the war.

This case will shortly disappear into the unsolved cases files. It will be forgotten by all those except the people it was intended to influence: the Iranian diaspora in the United States and perhaps in Europe as well. This lady should be come our Nadia Agha Soltan.
