

Muslims Really Love Their Women

This is a clip from the Middle East Media research Institute of a Sudanese lady being whipped as punishment for some transgression of Islamic law. After the scenes of the lady being whipped, the governor of Khartoum is presented “explaining” the larger context of the whipping.

Analysis. Any culture that actually respects its female members does not whip them. In Islam, and in other cultures, women are chattel. They are important as producers of children and keeper of the house and little else. They are not, in any sense, free human beings.

The Governor of Khartoum makes it clear that the whipping is an ISLAMIC punishment and that Sudan's laws are based on the Sharia. How would you feel if the Governor of California said these same things?
